

Response Reviewer -1

Additional information was added related to previous findings and gaps in research on parental burnout of working mothers through an extensive literature review, with an adequate number of references.

Included information related to study design, survey administration, and data collection.

Additional information was included to explain how participants were recruited and details were given to clarify criteria for inclusion and exclusion.

Survey instrument was further explained with what types of questions were included and the type of data collected.

Clarified why an IRB amendment was made and the necessity of an additional wave of recruitment was needed

5. Explain the sample calculation from this study. Left of 272 was it sufficient from sample calculation.

Provided details related to 80% power calculation.

Response Reviewer -2

Results section was expanded upon in greater detail.

Figures remained in same order but were updated to include additional information.

Additional figures were added for clarification and to provide more context for results

Tables are now referred to within the results section and all categories with n and % are included in written description of results.

Explanations of results include both n and % now.

Demographic table included.

Table was included for reference, and all categories with n and % are included in written description of results.

Table 5 is organized to make t-test and p-value clearer.

The discussion section was rewritten to synthesize current results with relevant findings from recent literature and answer the research questions laid out in the abstract/introduction. Strengths and limitations were addressed. Specific section related to public health implications included in discussion.

Conclusion section added.

Additional references added with inclusion of literature review.

References updated to meet APA 7th edition criteria.