

Reviewer comment-1

There is a wealth of literature showing the association and direction of the association between gender identity and sexual violence/victimization in various youth and young adult LGBTQ+ samples. There is inadequate discussion and summary of the existing literature and what this paper offers given that literature. The authors do not clearly lay out why they chose certain gender identity categories and do not appropriately categorize respondents as transgender (they do not follow standard/best practice). I also did not see any accompanying tables or figures.
