

Review comment-1

Yes. I think it bring a new perspective and awareness to LT care in a specific population. It also provides good background and new information for individuals unfamiliar with the topic. I think they add to the literature through a novel way of looking at the issue, a novel way of using data to understand the issue, and bringing awareness to a lesser know topical area.

the abstract should be reconfigured to introduce the sentence about LT care in Taiwan first and then supporting information after. Right now, it reads disjointed.

The cross department collaboration section needs a bit more clarification and explanation of why the operation of state systems were rigid and an example or two of such. As written, it is hard to connect the different pieces of the section into a unified whole.

The research methods section should include some information about where the quant data has come from and how literature was identified and chosen for inclusion for the literature review.

The paragraph starting “the above discussion reveals that in Taiwan” references are needed for some of the assertions in the paragraph. There should be a concluding paragraph. One is missing at the moment.
