

The manuscript is important to the social work field but needs to be re-organized

I would take away “The”

Abstract is not comprehensive. It was unclear what type of article this was. Was it a systematic review or some other theoretical paper? There was no discussion of methodology used. The author/s mention that “The main factors influencing the effectiveness of field instructors are explored in this study”, however, the title of the article is “The key contributing factors to field placement effectiveness”. Also mentions “The findings offer valuable insights” however, “findings or results” was not a section in the article.

The introduction seems long. The rest of the manuscript appears “scattered or unfocused”. The title says “online MSW programs” but the article did not focus on online. Several outdated references were used, if not for historical context, then I would suggest updating those that are more than 10 years old.

The article contains some useful information but is very confusing the way it is written. It is unclear what the true purpose is. Is this a review article or theoretical paper? May need to clearly state the purpose of the article and make sure this is reflected in the literature review and implications section of the paper.
