1.Consider briefly defining the concept of urban trauma in the introduction to provide clearer context.

2."The manuscript demonstrates a comprehensive methodological approach by integrating longitudinal, cross-sectional, qualitative, and mixed-methods research designs. This multidimensional strategy is appropriate for capturing the complexity of urban trauma."

3.Data integration – Consider briefly synthesizing the key trends across studies at the end of the section. For example, a short paragraph highlighting common predictors (e.g., poverty, violence exposure, social isolation) would enhance thematic coherence.

4.Policy Examples – The call for systemic change is persuasive, but briefly citing existing policy models (e.g., violence prevention initiatives, housing-first approaches, or community mental health legislation) would add specificity and practical relevance.
