

This manuscript is well written, and suitable for publication.

The research, policy development, and community engagement to reduce the risks associated with phthalates and endocrine disruptors are important public health issues.