

I do think this topic is important and could use more attention. With more explanation and detail on the study, I think this manuscript can help add to the body of knowledge concerning gender equity in healthcare and policy.

The title is appropriate. It clearly states what the article is describing.

The sections are appropriate; some just seem incomplete. The methodology section does not make it clear how mixed methods were utilized. The sections are also numbered but this makes them incomplete and does not read narratively.

They are not all formatted/cited the same way.

I feel as though the literature review section is incomplete and reads a little choppy. The gender-based limitations are not discussed in the introduction. The methodology section is not explained enough. The study could not be replicated with the information currently presented. The findings section does not include anything about the participants or the interviews with them.
