We did not choose to simply give a brief overview of the 2 presentations, as we viewed this as a report that could easily be duplicated, more or less, if other social workers had the benefit of our experience with this experiment. We did not consider this a waste of the reader's time as one goal was to share teaching ideas, some of which worked out well, and some we mentioned how we might improve for future presentations. We did intend for others to learn from our experiences.

We agree that the lack of integration of psychodynamic theory and behavioral techniques with clients who have turned away from people and use substances to regulate themselves is long overdue. Social Work is the profession to consider the ecological perspective regarding environmental contribution to the development of addiction and broaden treatment to include a variety of environmental treatment strategies, including Self Psychology, Interpersonal Neurobiology, 12-Step Programs, and Social Work concepts.

Title changes to 'Integrating Neurobiology, Self Psychology, and Social Work Concepts in Understanding the 12 Steps of Alcoholics Anonymous.'
