

Addressing Spirituality in Occupational Therapy Education	Editor's comment Yolanda P. Clark, JD, OT/L	Author's comment (If agreed with the editor, correct the manuscript and highlight that part in the manuscript. Authors must write his/her feedback here)
Is the manuscript important for the scientific community? Please write a few sentences explaining your answer	Yes, I believe this paper brings forward a very meaningful topic (spirituality) which I concur has not been a part of occupational therapy education. Bringing a focus on spirituality allows the OTP to take a holistic view of the client. I've personally had the experience of including the client factor of "asking about spirituality" but it was more of a "checking the box: option- not really addressing the client's spirituality.
Is the title of the article suitable? Do you have any alternative Title in your mind?	The title is suitable.
Is the abstract of the article comprehensive? If your answer is No, please provide suggestions	The abstract gives a clear and thorough overview of the problem, the purpose of the study, the instructional model used, and the key findings. Consider adding a brief statement about the number of students or the specific course structure, to make the abstract even more complete .
Do you think the English quality of the article is suitable for scholarly communications? If your answer is No, please provide suggestions	Yes , the writing is clear, professional, and flows nicely. Consider: Some of the sentences are length- maybe break the sentences down for smoother flow of reading.
Please provide your comments regarding the appropriateness of different sections of the manuscript.	Overall, the manuscript is well-organized and easy to follow. - Introduction: Nicely sets up why spirituality should have a place in occupational therapy education; - Methods: Explains the Spirituality Unit clearly, including how adult learning theories and the SCIL-OT model guided the design; Results: The results well presented.

Do you think that the references in the manuscript are proper, recent and sufficient? If you have any suggestions, please write here.	Yes, no issues or concerns noted.
