

REVIEWER-1

The article review is much better but there are still a few things that still need to be addressed.

First, the authors should include a table with the studies, thematic domains, and other pertinent qualitative data that is highlighted in the narrative. Second, a flow chart or some other outline documenting the number of documents reviewed, excluded, and included in the analysis would also be necessary for publication. This is necessary for readers to understand the authors' exclusion/inclusion process to determine the presence of bias. Both of the above are common in articles using structured qualitative document analysis research.